FRENCH OFFENSIVE BEGINS ALONG THE ENTIRE WEST FRONT

Joffre's Men Hammering Germans as Britons and Belgians Wait.

HARD FIGHTING IN THE EAST

Petrograd Admits Austro-Germans Have Crossed the Dniester, but Claim Other Victories; Italians Are Advancing Beyond the Isonzo.

By Associated Press.

LONDON, June 8.—Virtually the entire western line of battle, except those portions held by the Belgians and the British, has been the scene of what would appear to be a series of offensive movements initiated by the French. In the region of Arras the French have extended the area of their attacks, while they are pressing all along the front from the angle of the Aisne and the Oise in a northerly direction as far as the British positions near Lallaasee, where the British forces are lying apparently quiescent.

For the past three weeks the French have been advancing slowly but steadily in the country immediately north of Arras. Here they met a determined resistance from the formidable German work known as "the labyrinth," part of which, however, is now in their control. The French have been gathering in prisoners. At Hebuterne they have taken some 400 and at Soissons 250 more.

Desperate German counter attacks according to the French report have been made, but without success and with terrible losses to the attackers. The German official announcement makes but brief reference to the western front merely recording the repulses of French attacks.

Rivers figure more or less prominently today in the reports from both sides. From the eastern front the Russians claim to have pushed their offensive movement across the Pruth, near Kolomea, while Petrograd has admitted the advance of the Austro-Germans across the river Dniester, in Galicia. The river Dubysa changed hands five times in one day, with the Russians finally in possession and the Isonzo is the scene of the most important Italian advance into Austrian territory.

There has been little news with regard to this Italian movement other than the official admission from Vienna that the Italians appear to be advancing against the Isonzo in strong force.

Hungary is experiencing a political crisis similar to that which has just come to an end in England. Although the opposition leaders have expressed their assent, controversies which antedate the war have thus far prevented the formation of a coalition cabinet.

NEW NOTE TO GERMAN MAY BE SENT TOMORROW

WASHINGTON, June 8.—After two hours' discussion of the note to Germany at the Cabinet meeting today, Secretary Tumulty at the direction of President Wilson made this announcement:

"The note was gone over and discussed and put in final form. It probably will go forward to Berlin tomorrow."

The Cabinet members uniformly refused to discuss it. It was learned definitely that only a few slight changes in phraseology were made in the Cabinet meeting. The note was taken up in the form in which it came after Secretary Bryan had spent hours on it, after his conference yesterday with the President.

After the meeting Secretary Bryan went to luncheon with other members. Cabinet members said that while possibly a few words might be changed, it would go forward to Berlin in practically the form agreed upon at today's meeting.

When the Cabinet assembled to discuss the note Secretary Bryan was not among the number. He remained at his office closeted with Counselor Lansing and sent word to the President that he was detained by important work. Mr. Bryan, however, has conferred frequently with the President while the note had been under construction.

At noon after the Cabinet meeting had been under way an hour Secretary Bryan arrived. "I'm sorry I am late," he said as he entered the executive offices. "I sent word to the President I would be detained by important work." There were some indications that the discussion of the note might have been delayed until Mr. Bryan's arrival.

ITALIANS AND AUSTRIANS CLASH ON ISONOZO RIVER.

ROME, Italy, via Chiasso and Paris, June 8.—Italian forces are today engaged with the forces of Austria on the western banks of the Isonzo river at a point north of Tolmino. They are fighting also around Gradiska, evidently with the intention of encircling this location.

Caporetto, Cormond, Versa, Cervignano, Terzo, Porto Buso and Grado, stretching in a line north and south from the head of the gulf of Trieste, are today in their possession and have been since the opening of hostilities.

It apparently is the intention of the Italian military leaders to deprive the Austrians of their first line of defense the along the Isonzo, on their own territory. To this end, Monfero

SCHOOL BOARD MAKES TERMS WITH STUDENTS; STRIKE ENDS

All Five Who Failed at Mount Pleasant Will Be Given Examinations in Full.

Special to The Courier.

MOUNT PLEASANT, June 8.—The strike of the graduating class of the Mount Pleasant High School has come to an end as a result of an agreement reached with the School Board. The board, at a special meeting last night, proposed that all five of the students who failed to pass their final examinations shall, within 10 days of the opening of the next school term, be given an examination to be conducted by a disinterested party acceptable to both the students and the board. If they pass the test thus imposed, their diplomas will be properly sealed and signed.

All five of the students who failed, including Harold Myers, president of the class, over whom the trouble started, will participate in the formal commencement exercises. They will receive blank diplomas.

After the School Board made its proposition the senior class held a meeting at city hall. Attorney N. A. Cort, T. O. Anderson and T. S. Shaw, members of the citizens' committee, advised the students to accept the conditions imposed, and this was done.

The class play will be held tonight, according to schedule, and the commencement exercises tomorrow night. On Friday the senior class will give its annual dance.

BILLS ARE SIGNED

Governor Approves the Six Workmen's Compensation Measures.

HARRISBURG, June 8.—Governor Brumbaugh last night announced his approval of the series of bills known as the workmen's compensation act.

They are six in number and embrace the bill defining the liability of an employer to pay damages for injuries received by an employe, establishing an elective schedule of compensation and providing procedure for the determination of liability and compensation thereunder; the bill creating the bureau of workmen's compensation of the department of labor and industry and the creating of a state fund for the insurance of compensation. They become effective January 1, 1916.

Governor Brumbaugh today signed a bill providing a tax of two cents on every $100 worth of stock transferred. This act is one of the revenue-raising measures advocated by the state administration. It becomes effective January 1, 1916.

CITY GETS ITS MONEY.

City Council has at last received the $100,000 realized from the sale of its bonds last March. City Treasurer E. E. Fleto received a telegram from Philadelphia this afternoon to the effect that the $100,000 draft attached to the bonds had been honored by the bonding house, and that the money was now subject to the city's check.

Council will meet tomorrow night and it is likely that contracts will be let for the paving of several streets. Council will also proceed immediately to pay off the $55,000 indebtedness that had accumulated under the old borough government, the interest of which has been a serious burden upon the town for some years.

BRITONS ARE VICTIMS.

One Killed, Four Wounded During Mexican Fighting.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Advices to the State Department today from Vera Cruz transmitted a wireless message from Tampico reporting the capture of Tuxpam by Villa forces Sunday. One British citizen was killed and four were wounded during the fighting. S. P. Jones was killed; Thomas Mallard, Mrs. Mallard and their infant child, and A. T. Graves were wounded while seeking cover.

Consul Silliman at Vera Cruz reported that General Obregon's victory over the Villa forces at Leon appeared to be confirmed. He said it was reported Obregon had lost his right arm in the fighting.

A TINY CHECK.

Government's Slip for Small Sum Goes Back to Treasury.

Dr. T. R. Francis recently sent 10 cents to the patent office at Washington for a pamphlet describing a certain patent. In reply he received information that no such patent had ever been issued, but the dime was not returned. Later he received word that the funds of the patent office had been transferred to the Treasury Department and a check for that amount was forwarded to him.

Dr. Francis forwarded the check to C. G. Llewellyn, collector of internal revenue, with the request that 10 cents worth of drug application blanks, required under the Harrison act, be sent to him.

DUNBAR TEACHERS.

A. C. Gwynne is Re-elected Principal at Salary of $100.

At a meeting of Dunbar School Board last night, A. C. Gwynne was re-elected principal at a salary of $100 a month. Other teachers elected were: Room 7, Odessa Newcomer, $75; Room 8, Lulu Shaw, $55; Room 5, Pearl Eicher, $50; Room 4, Ella Baker, $50; Room 3, Agnes Nemon, $50; Room 2, Elizabeth Perren, $50; and Room 1, Clara Carroll, $50.

A new primary school will be established on Woodvale street. Miss Alice McElhany was elected teacher at a salary of $50 a month. The millage was fixed at 13 mills, the same as last year.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY OPENS MURDER CASE AGAINST JOE EITS

He Faces Charge of Murder for Killing of John Moore at Gans.

CONNELLSVILLE MEN ON JURY

Four Talesmen from This Town are Accepted for Service; Youth Convicted of Playfully Pointing Firearms; June Docket a Record One.

Special to The Courier.

UNIONTOWN, June 8.—District Attorney S. Ray Shelby this forenoon opened the case for the commonwealth against Joe Eits, alias Jusdino Ezzi, who was arraigned before Judge J. H. Van Swearingen yesterday for the murder of John Moore, a negro, at Gans Station last Christmas night. It took the lawyers all day yesterday to secure a jury, and at the opening of court this morning the 12 men who will hear the testimony were sworn by Deputy Clerk of Courts D. W. Smitley.

The district attorney gave an extended address to the jury in opening his case. He spoke at length on the various classes of murders and outlined the testimony that he expects to present for the commonwealth. "Whatever you think is the logical verdict that should you return," said the district attorney to the jurors.

Joe Sabatino, with whom Eits boarded at Gans, was the first important witness. He testified that Moore, the man who was slain, came to the boarding house on Christmas night and demanded something to eat. When given meat he threw it on the floor and demanded macaroni. He was put out, but returned. The second time the boarding mistress put him out. The party then went to the home of James O. Hunker, an American, who lived next door. While there Eits went into another room. Later a shot was fired. Sabatino testified that Eits said to him that a negro tried to shoot him, and he had to shoot the man to save himself." Moore's dead body was found.

Connellsville is unusually well represented on this jury. Out of 50 veniremen examined, four local men were accepted by both sides. They were Jacob W. Goldsmith, Robert Norris, A. S. Silcox, O. E. Santenmyer. The other jurors are George Hankins, Dunbar township; Oliver Baisley, Connellsville township; James Boland, Georges township; William Rider, Masontown; Charles Brown, Uniontown; William Garwood, South Brownsville, and Chauncey Kimball, German township.

Wilbur Bodkin of Dunbar, was found guilty of assault and battery, playfully pointing firearms and was only pointing fire arms, in a sealed verdict returned in Judge Reppert's court. Young Bodkin, who is 19 years old, according to the testimony, slapped his father's face and pointed a revolver at him and pulled the trigger. For some reason the revolver did not fire. Young Bodkin claimed that he knew that the revolver was defective and would not fire.

Before Judge Reppert Peter McClain of Connellsville, was placed on trial on a paternity charge, preferred by Mary M. Dean, 21 years old. He was convicted.

DONATES $5 TO BUY FLOUR FOR POOR BELGIANS

The Courier today received a check for $5.00 from J. S. Newcomer of near town, to be applied towards the fund to buy bread for the Belgians.

Mr. Newcomer responded to the appeal being made to send a "ship of food for Belgium" from Western Pennsylvania.

The appeal to Western Pennsylvania for aid for the starving Belgians is meeting liberal response from all counties. Connellsville should do its share.

Contributions will be accepted by The Courier and promptly forwarded to the proper authorities.

Deputy Prothonotary Robert V. Wright yesterday opened a new Common Pleas docket. The June term docket which was closed, contained 869 entries, the largest number contained in any Common Pleas docket for one term in many years. The greater number of the entries were judgment notes and suits in assumpsit.

Ben P. Pike of Connellsville was convicted of a paternity charge preferred by Mattie McGill of Owensdale but was acquitted of a charge of carrying concealed weapons.

The cases of false pretense preferred by local foreign residents against L. J. Nowald of Little Rock, Ark., in connection with the sale of western farm land were continued, affidavits that the defendant is too ill to appear, being presented by his attorneys.

Samuel Lucas was acquitted of assault and battery upon his wife. The costs were equally divided between the two.

DAYLIGHT ROBBERS GET $8,500

Three Bandits Hold Up Cashiers on Way to Bank.

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 8—Another daylight holdup, this time by automobile bandits who robbed two men on their way in a buggy to deposit money in a bank, took place in New York today. The robbers got away with a satchell containing $8,500.

The victims are George Listardt, cashier, and Thomas Boyd, superintendent of a branch of the Bordens Condensed Milk Company who were driving through a sparsely settled district of the Bronx to deposit collections. They were held up by three men who after beating them and stealing the satchel ran across a footbridge over the New York Central tracks, and entered an auto and escaped.

No Police Court.

No arrests were made by the police last night, hence there was no police court this morning.

CLOUDY SKIES BUT SCHOOL PICNIC IS A GREAT SUCCESS

Thousands Hie Themselves to Shady Grove for Annual Outing.

SPECIAL CARS ARE CROWDED

First Movement is Not Such a Big One But Later on the Cars are Filled to Capacity With Happy Children and Parents; Crowd is Well Handled.

Though the day dawned cool and cloudy, with the sun peeping out only on rare occasions the annual picnic of the Connellsville and South Connellsville public schools at Shady Grove Park today, gave promise of being a success as usual. The first cars to leave for the park were not filled to capacity but those which left later in the morning had all on board that they could carry in safety.

Tickets were distributed at the school rooms this morning, and as these were good on any car at any time during the day, many of the pupils waited and went to the park on the regular cars during the afternoon. This made the number of special cars considerable less than usual.

It was estimated this morning that close to 2,000 school children and their parents had been carried to the park. To these will be added several hundred more who will go during the late afternoon and early evening.

The picnickers are the guests of Manager R. S. Coyle, who supplied free transportation and free roller coaster and merry-go-round tickets. Three thousand tickets of each kind were distributed this morning by the various ward principals.

Every precaution was taken to provide the students with safe trips to the park and after they got there, they were kept under the supervision of teachers and parents. The little folks were especially well cared for. The lower grade children will be returned home in special cars early this evening. The older folks will remain to finish out the day at the dance pavilion or at the other amusements the park affords.

The West Penn officials did good work in caring for the picnickers. It is a special pride of M. A. Coffey, superintendent of transportation, and E. R. Kooser, his assistant, that the school picnics are handled without mishap, from year to year. This is no easy task, considering that practically all of the passengers are children.

HAND BRAKES BOTHERSOME.

Two West Penn Motormen on Injured List Because of Them.

Harry Decker is another West Penn motorman that is laid up on account of an accident in which the hand brake featured. While at Ilecla on his run yesterday the "dog" slipped and the hand brake swung around, hitting him on the hand. The brake struck one of the knuckles, breaking a bone further up in the hand.

This is the second accident of the kind on the West Penn within three days. Ralph Fisher, another motorman, was hit in the eye Saturday when the "dog" was released while he was moving a freezer of ice cream.

OHIOPYLE LAD IS STRICKEN SUDDENLY; DEATH MYSTERIOUS

Family Blames Canned Tomatoes, but Evidence of Ptomaine Poisoning is Lacking.

Louis Tressler, three-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Tressler, of near Ohiopyle, died about 8 o'clock last evening under peculiar circumstances. His parents attribute his death to poisoning caused by eating canned tomatoes, but the mother and a sister also ate some of the same dish, and were not affected.

Soon after supper the child suffered violent pains and screaming wildly, rolled over on the floor in agony. His parents did all possible to relieve his suffering but about 8 o'clock, less than half an hour after he was stricken, he expired.

No doctor was summoned, as the family lives about two miles out from Ohiopyle. Dr. Johnson of Ohiopyle, was notified this morning, but he had not examined the body up to noon today. From information given by the boy's parents, Dr. Johnson states, there were no evidences of ptomaine poisoning, hence the cause of death is clouded in mystery, unless a post mortem is held. Coroner H. J. Bell will be notified.

The Tressler boy had been in perfect health prior to his sudden attack. Besides the parents, who are well known farmers, a small sister survives.

VIEWERS TAKE REPORTS

They Act on 10 Petitions Presented to the Court.

Reports on 10 separate petitions to vacate roads were made by the board of viewers to court yesterday afternoon.

The board recommended that the Polecat Hollow road in Bullskin township be vacated, but they recommended against the vacation of 6,575 feet of road in Springfield township, leading from Detwiler's Mills to Rock Ridge, the board being of the opinion that this highway is still a necessity.

The viewers also reported adversely to the proposed change of a roadway which leads up the mountain on what is known as the Ridge Route, to a road constructed along a course of lower altitude.

The vacation of a road which starts near Friendship Hill school in Springfield township, was recommended, as was also the roadway from Caldwell road up Chestnut Ridge.

Rose O. McClory was awarded $500 and Annie McCarney $650 for damage to their properties in Dunbar township by reason of the construction of a brick road.

COUNCIL MEETING BRIEF

Members Will Meet Wednesday to Take up the Tax Question.

Council held a brief session last night, little business being transacted. The members will meet tomorrow afternoon to discuss the tax levy for 1915 and will probably fix the tax at the meeting to be held tomorrow night.

Upon receipt of an opinion from City Solicitor Higbee advising them that the course would be legal, council exonerated the Sligo Iron & Steel Company and the Smith House from the taxes of 1911. The Sligo tax was $493.22 and the Smith House $556.50. Both were duplicates of H. C. Norton.

The ordinance changing the lights beneath the West Side railroad bridges was passed finally. Sixteen candlepower incandescent lamps will be replaced by 80-candle-power nitrogen lights.

ONE OF THE FAMILY

Collie Dog Is Adopted by Old Sow as Part of Litter.

Some time ago, The Courier's Smithfield correspondent appeared with the remarkable story of how John W. Weaver, a farmer, in tracing the cause of diminishing milk supply in his cows, discovered that five lusty shoats pastured in the same field were getting sleek and fat on milk they were stealing from the cows. Now he has a better one than that.

L. D. Ramsey, a neighboring farmer, has a fine sow with a litter of pigs and also a valuable Scotch collie. Going out to his hog lot on Saturday, he discovered the collie wedged in between the pigs taking a share of sustenance from the sow. Mr. Ramsey says he never saw or heard of a case similar to this.

TO HOLD UNION SERVICES.

Churches Will Unite Sunday Nights in July and August.

At a meeting of the Ministerial Association in the United Presbyterian Church yesterday afternoon, it was decided to hold union services on Sunday evenings during the months of July and August. Last year these union meetings were held in the open air at the band stand.

The place of holding the meetings has been left to a committee which will report at the next meeting. There will be eight meetings in all, so each clergyman in the association will deliver a sermon.

These meetings were very successful last year, the congregations being especially large.

SCHOOL BOARD TO SUE BONDSMEN OF TAX COLLECTOR

Another Effort to be Made to Settle Up Miller Duplicates.

THREE NEW STUDENT TEACHERS

Misses Kathleen Cable, Alice McKevitt and Lillian Hicks Chosen to Train as Substitutes This Year; No Tax Collector or Depository Named.

In order to effect some sort of settlement on the three outstanding duplicates of C. M. Miller, tax collector of the old borough of New Haven, School Board last night authorized Solicitor H. G. May to enter suit against the bondsmen, if payment is not made of the balance outstanding. Solicitor May declared that he had already notified these bondsmen a half-dozen times to the same effect, but members of the board let it be known that they are "in earnest" this time in their determination to enter suit for the collection of this tax.

Incident to the tax discussion, no collector of school tax was named, but the meeting adjourned to convene at the call of the chair in adjourned session, to name this official. The law requires that he shall be named at this meeting, but by making the next meeting an adjourned one, the law will be complied with.

At the recommendation of the finance committee, the requests of five women for exonerations were refused. There was some discussion of a request of the Odd Fellows for exoneration of a year's tax due on their temple, which was formerly the Lutheran Church. As this was a matter the members thought should be considered by the lodge and the church trustees, the board took no action. The request of Mrs. S. E. Morris was referred to the finance committee.

A resolution was adopted at the request of P. S. Briggs of Philadelphia, purchaser of the board's $30,000 bond issue, stipulating that the Guarantee Trust & Safe Deposit Company shall be the depository for the sinking fund of the issue. This was merely a more specific statement of the facts contained in the original resolution.

At the recommendations of Principal B. B. Smith and Superintendent S. P. Ashe, Misses Kathleen Cable, Lillian Hicks and Alice McKevitt of the Class of 1915, were designated as student-teachers. They will serve for a year as substitutes, with the understanding that when teachers are selected next year they will be considered just as any other applicant. One of last year's student teachers, Miss Eleanor Horner, was recently elected to a school.

In the assignment of teachers for next year, there were but two changes, Miss Fredda Rhoads being assigned to fifth instead of fourth grade in the Fourth Ward building and Miss Eleanor Horner being assigned to the fourth grade room. All teachers elected at the last meeting, it was reported, have signed their contracts.

The application of the mother of Charles F. Graham, aged 16, to have the board secure his release from the Soldiers' Orphans' Industrial School, was refused by the board, it being the opinion of members that he is better off at the institution, where he can remain until he is 21 years old.

The applications of Misses Edith Morton, Ruth Baer, Laura Engel and Pearl Sandels for state normal diplomas and of Miss Rebekah Truxall for a college certificate, were approved by the board.

The commencement committee reported expenditures of $181.21, which did not include an item of $41 for Kiferle's orchestra, the latter being read in the regular list of bills. Dr. John Carey Acheson and Dr. John M. Mechlin who delivered addresses each received $35, their expenses at the Arlington Hotel cost $4, the Colonial Theatre for two nights cost $80 and sundris amounted to $27.21. The exercises consisted of four sessions in the Colonial, but the class play paid its own expenses and there was no charge for the baccalaureate sermon night.

The property committee submitted a list of repairs and improvements needed at the various buildings and it was empowered to have the work done. The repairs consist of painting, varnishing, plastering, repairs to stairs, cement walks, and new toilet equipments for the Fourth street building, West Side.

The supply committee was notified to meet with agents on the night of June 21, to consider supply contracts for next term.

The secretary's report showed the general fund overdrawn to the amount of $320.23 and the sinking fund overdrawn $174.57.

Members present were C. W. Hays, president L. J. Shaw, C. R. Hetzel, J. W. McClaren, J. R. Davidson and R. K. Long.

Volet Held for Court.

Patsy Volet, accused of operating a "speakeasy" at Vanderbilt, was held for court under $500 bail, after a preliminary hearing before Alderman Fred Munk last night.

At a meeting of the South Connellsville school board last night, J. E. Shupe was elected school enumerator and Mrs. Jennie Landefield was chosen janitress of the Humbert building.

THE OLD-FASHIONED PINKING RETURNS TO FAVOR.

Pussy willow taffeta was used to make up this gown whose quaint pinked edges are reminiscent of the sixties. The fulled skirt is cut in deep scallops on the lower edge and these in tehir turn are pinked. The bodice consisting mainly of girdle has the decolletage outlined by a very full ruffle of the taffeta, which, like the skirt, is scalloped and pinked on the edges. Inside of this is a little tucker of white net and the little puffed sleeves are also of the net.

GENUINE PRESCRIPTION FOR ALL RHEUMATISM

Satisfaction Guaranteed or Money Back Says A. A. Clarke.

Rheuma—that is the name of the scientific prescription that is putting old rheumatism out of business.

Rheuma cures by driving the uric acid from the blood. It also acts directly on the kidneys and is better for them than most so-called kidney cures.

Porter Smith, Dobbin, W. Va., writes, "I have been a great sufferer from rheumatism for about 25 years. The disease had become chronic. I began taking Rheuma with little faith in its virtues, but was better from the first day I began its use, and at this time have no more pains."

A. A. Clarke and all druggists sell Rheuma, and no rheumatic sufferer can afford not to use it. 50 cents a bottle. Your money back if not satisfied.—Adv.

BIG PLANT LEASED

Schwab May be Interested in Deal Affecting the Cramps' Concern.

PHILADELPHIA, June 8.—Negotiations are under way for the lease of the entire plant of the William Cramp' Sons' Ship & Engine Building Company of this city and the construction of a large fleet of vessels will be begun immediately. The transfer has been made, according to well funded and undenied reports circulated in financial circles in this city today. One of the largest steamship companies is said to be behind the negotiations and the name of Charles M. Schwab, who two or three years ago acquired the Fore River Shipbuilding Company's plant at Quincy, Mass., and the Harlan & Hollingsworth Corporation's plant at Wilmington, Del., was mentioned repeatedly in connection with the deal.

In shipping and financial circles it was rumored that the organization dickering for the plant is a new one formed by Schwab, who intends to use the new company as a means of obtaining entire control of Cramps. Until recently Cramps had contracts for only two vessels other than naval craft and while other concerns were obtaining contracts for merchant vessels Cramps were working only at part capacity.

BUFFALO, N. Y., June 8.—Eugene C. Roberts, Jr., for the past four years superintendent of the Fairmont Coal Company at New Castle, of which his father is general manager, will leave here within the next 30 days as a junior lieutenant in the Canadian overseas contingent. He has the distinction of being the only American offered a Canadian army commission.

Lieutenant Roberts, who is a famous Syracuse varsity oarsman and athlete, is 28 years of age. He, while Deputy Sheriff of Clarion county, on May 30, 1914, was shot through the head when he tried to arrest W. C. Fox, fugitive from justice. Fox was killed later when he tried to escape from the State police. Roberts lingered for weeks with his wound and for a time his life was despaired of.

FRENCH RETAIN ALL POSITIONS IN WEST

PARIS, June 8.—The French war office this afternoon gave out the following statement:

"In the section to the north of Arras there were yesterday evening and last night some infantry engagements. On the eastern slopes of the plateau of Lorette the enemy replied in an attack from us by three violent counter attacks. This activity did not result in any changes of position.

"To the northeast of the sugar refinery of Souchez, we made further progress yesterday. At Neuville St. Vaast we gained possession, as a result of very violent fighting, of a group of houses.

In the region of the labyrinth a German counter attack has been repulsed. Southeast of Hebuterne, the Germans yesterday endeavored to retake the positions they had lost. Four times they were driven back. We increased our gain to the northeast by taking two lines of German trenches along a 500 yard front. We took a total of 150 prisoners, of whom 100 had not been wounded.

BRITISH DEFEAT AT SEDDUL BAHR SEVERE.

BERLIN, via wireless to Sayville, June 8.—Among the news items given out today by the Overseas News Agency is the following:

"Constantinople reports give details of the severe British defeat at Seddul Bahr. The Turks in their attack forced their enemies back and captured large stores of arms and ammunition and took prisoners.

"The position of the British troops is dangerous. They are without the support of the heavy guns of their ships and the men are nervous and without spirit. Travelers report that at Alexandria, Egypt, there are no less than 40,000 wounded British soldiers."

REWARD DARING AVIATOR FOR HEROIC EXPLOITS

LONDON, June 8.—Reginald A. J. Warneford, the young Canadian sub-lieutenant in the royal navy who yesterday in an aeroplane attacked and wrecked a Zeppelin dirigible over Belgium was today given the Victoria Cross.

Warneford's exploit marks the first time a Zeppelin has been brought down to earth by a monoplane. The Canadian aviator sighted the German airship over Belgium and at once mounted to attack it. By a brilliant flight he secured a position above it and dropped incendiary bombs. His aim was god and the Zeppelin crashed to the ground and burned up. The members of her crew, 28 men, were killed.

NEUTRAL VESSELS SUNK; WOMEN AND CHILDREN DIE

LONDON, June 8.—The Belgian steamer Memnitor has been sent to the bottom by a German torpedo near the North Fireland, off the coast of Kent. Out of 23 persons on board, only six were saved. "Relief will be granted in all these as well as in previous cases," said Mr. Asquith.

ARREST JITNEY DRIVER.

Charge He Did Not Maintain a Regular Schedule.

By Associated Press.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 8.—A petition for a writ of habeas corpus was presented to the supreme court of appeals today for the release from custody of M. T. Hickey, a jitney bus driver in Huntington who is held by the Huntington authorities for violation of a city ordinance requiring jitney busses to maintain a schedule whether they are carrying passengers or empty, and taxing them far in excess of private automobiles.

The petitioner alleges the ordinance was passed at the instance of the street railway company operating in Huntington and that it is confiscatory and therefore unconstitutional.

UNBEARABLE SKIN TROUBLE SPREAD

417 Colwyn Ave., Darby, Pa.—"My uncle's trouble began as an irritation and was almost unbearable when he was in bed and became warm. It first appeared as small pimples and it spread so rapidly that he became alarmed. His arms were first affected above the elbows and then it spread over both arms and shoulder blades, afterwards it came on the legs and stomach. It burned so that he rubbed it and that made it spread more. His clothing irritated it and at night he lost sleep continually, sometimes lying awake the whole night. The itching and burning were so intense that he scratched himself until exhausted.

"His sister advised him to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. He purchased two boxes of Cuticura Ointment and two cakes of Cuticura Soap and before he had used half of either he felt a great relief. He steadily recovered and was able to sleep until in about five weeks he was entirely healed of the trouble." (Signed) Paul A. Ludwig, August 8, 1914.

HUBBARD WILL FILED

Children By First Marriage Not Mentioned in Document.

BUFFALO, N. Y., June 8.—The wills of Elbert Hubbard and his wife, who lost their lives in the Lusitania disaster, were filed for probate here yesterday. The documents were drawn by Mr. Hubbard and were almost identical. Both provided that in case one survived the other the estate should be divided equally between Elbert H. Hubbard II, son, and Miriam, daughter. Several other children by Hubbard's first marriage are not mentioned in the will.

The value of the estate is problematical, although it is known that Mr. Hubbard carried insurance policies amounting to over $100,000. He owned considerable real estate at East Aurora.

All Four Blast Furnaces Operating at Monongahela Works.

For the first time since 1907 all four furnaces at the Monongahela blast furnace works are now operating, the fourth having been blown in yesterday. These furnaces supply the raw material for the National Tube Company at McKeesport, and their operation in full means more work for the tube plant and the other mills of the United States Steel Corporation in and around McKeesport.

For a number of years but two of the furnaces were working. Several weeks ago a third was blown in. Men to operate these works have been gathered from former employes of the company, their number being sufficient to supply the new demand.

TEN PLANTS PLAN BENZOL RECOVERY FROM COKING COAL

Good Return Virtually Assured By-Product Plants of Country.

NOT DEPENDENT UPON THE WAR

End of Conflict Will Not Terminate Demand for Either Benzol or Toluol in This Country: Present Prices Represent $10,500 a Day Output.

The European war has given a big impetus to the by-products of American coking, particularly the manufacture of benzol. The business is not one which will stop with the cessation of war. We have demand at home for these products. This demand has hitherto been supplied by Germany, which held a practical monopoly of the business. The product in times of peace is profitable, the home demand is ample, so that there seems no doubt of the success of the numerous plants being installed over the country. The United States Steel Corporation is erecting three benzol plants in connection with its by-product coke plants at Sharon, Pa., Gary, Ind., and Birmingham, Ala. Other plants are being erected in the same connection as follows: Cambria Steel Company, Johnstown, Pa.; Republica Iron & Steel Company, Hazelton, Pa.; Lackawanna Steel Company, Lackawanna, N. Y.; Inland Steel Company, South Chicago, Ill.; Northwestern Iron Company, Maysville, Wis.; Zenith Furnace Company, Duluth, Minn.; Laclede Gas Company, Saint Louis, Mo. The Youngstown Sheet & Tube Company is building 201 by-product ovens at Youngstown, O., and these will probably be supplemented with a benzol plant.

In every case the output of benzol and toluol has been contracted for many months with manufacturers of explosives in the east on contracts not contingent upon European war conditions. This development of by-product reclaiming will add largely to the possible profits of coke furnace operations and is brought about entirely by cessation of imports from Germany since the war started. It is stated that practically the entire output of present and projected plants has been bought up until January, 1916, and that much has been contracted for a much longer period. Contracts are on a basis which promises large returns as small supply and large demand have conspired to raise prices from 10% to as high as 300%, over quotations ruling before war was declared. Carbolic acid, one of the by-products from coke oven gas and tar, has risen from 7 cents a pound to $1.28 a pound, an increase of 1,800%. Although practically all coke ovens included plans for benzol reclamation these were not built prior to the war on account of depressed business conditions but demand for these products has made it a profitable commercial proposition. Conditions now appear to warrant their construction in view of the large profits certain to follow while demand for explosives continues and a fair profit on these by-products even after the European demand may have subsided.

The estimated yield of benzol from a ton of coking coal is between two and three gallons, so that the average yield of benzol from each of the plants now in course of construction may be placed very conservatively at around 3,000 gallons a day, or 30,000 gallons for the ten plants. If the average price to be received for the product be estimated at 10 cents, this means, on the basis of a 5-cent production cost, that the steel companies of this country will receive a total addition to their profits of $10,500 a day. Even placing the price at the low level of 11 cents in normal times, the net gain in earnings for the companies would be nearly $2,000 daily.

Toluol, which is obtained in the benzol process, is one of the principal bases for the manufacture of chemical dyes. The threatened dye famine has caused cloth manufacturers to turn their hopes to the coke plants for future supplies. It appears, however, that the dye process is still in an experimental stage here, but both steel and oil interests say that with the development of the by-product industry in coke here is no reason why the manufacturers of dyes in this country should not be brought to a point where the bulk of the needs of our dyers may be met at home. Some big oil interests who are closely in touch with the benzol situation even go so far as to predict that with the proper kind of encouragement the United States will be an exporter of toluol and benzol in competition with Germany after the war.

Toluol and benzol also play an important part in the manufacture of picric acid and other explosive compounds, and it is owing to this fact that the present overwhelming demand is due. The price of benzol has risen from the normal level of from 12 to 25 cents to $1 to $1.25 a gallon. One large steel company which is erecting a benzol plant has already contracted for the sale of all its product at a dollar a gallon, the contract covering a considerable period of operations. The estimated cost of making benzol is from 5 to 10 cents a gallon.

Late is one of the instances where those who got into the field last will reap the largest profits. The companies that first started to erect benzol refineries got, it is true, high prices, some of the earlier contracts being made at around 10 cents a gallon, but as it appeared that the supplies from these sources would not be sufficient to meet the requirements of the manufacturers of explosives others were induced to go into the business and they were able to demand and get from two to three times the price.

THE SPOILERS.

It has been the fashion of late to picturize the works of famous authors, and Selig has advanced this as a fine art in "The Spoilers" from the book of Rex Beach, in the most spirited and vital fashion. This moving picture play in nine reels had its first public presentation at the spacious and beautiful new Strand Theatre on Broadway in New York City. It followed this success with a three month's engagement at the Studebaker Theatre, Chicago, and just recently ended a two months' record-breaking run at the Chestnut Street Opera House, Philadelphia. It is now in it second month at the Nixon Theatre, Pittsburg.

The significant voice of the great centers where this picture has been shown speaks volumes for the production which will undoubtedly become a phenomenal attraction wherever presented. "The Spoilers" is the most virile and red-blooded romance ever filmed. It has been visualized in stunning fashion, reflecting upon the astuteness of its progenitor, William N. Selig, and the deep, live sympathetic genius of its producer, Colin Campbell, as well as in the vigorous and responsive acting of William Parnum and all the other artists enlisted to make it a star cast extraordinary. The great production will be seen here on June 16-17 at the Colonial Theatre.

The Globe

Manager C. E. Wagner of the Globe Theatre has booked a number of fine attractions commencing today with "Road O' Strife," part one of "The House of Secrets," a Lubin picture of intense interest. The story was written by Emmett Campbell Hall and the cast includes Crane Wilbur, Mary Charlesson, formerly with the Vitagraph, Richard Wangemann, Bernard Siegel, John E. Ince, and Clara Lambert. The story centers around a beautiful young girl who grows to womanhood in a mysterious shuttered house in a little village, her presence unknown to all but a recluse, and Robert Dane, a student and dreamer, who has forsaken his books for the call of the open. "The house of Fear" will be shown each Tuesday until it is concluded. Tomorrow's bill includes a Vitagraph picture in two acts featuring Norn Talmadge, and "The Conspiracy of the Chateau," an Essanay attraction presenting Beverly Bayne and Edwin Palmer. Thursday's features are "The Taming of Rita," with Margaret Gibson in the leading role, and the Timid Mr. Tootles with Sidney Drew the principal character. Mr. Wagner has also booked "The Goddess," a serial picture, featuring Anita Stewart and Earl Williams, to be shown in the near future.

The Arcade

In spite of the warm weather, good sized audiences witnessed the performances at the Arcade yesterday when a program of musical comedy and vaudeville was given. The "Playland Kiddies," compose dof a company of nine little girls, ranging in age from six to sixteen years, were greeted with rounds of applause, especially the tiny member of the troupe who sang and danced like a veteran. The children have their own special set of scenery and are under the direction of Miss Vallar Clapp. Crawford & Walker presented "The Girl from Dixie," in magnificent style with a beautiful stage setting carried by themselves, representing a scene in the south. Wagner & Diggs closed the ollo with a laughable sketch, introducing their wonderful singing dog, who sang the "Swanee River" in perfection. Good pictures were shown. Don't be late for the Country Store next Friday evening. Presents will be given away between first and second shows.

The Soisson

"NEPTUNE'S DAUGHTER."

The perfect woman, Annette Kellerman and a company of one thousand players appears at the Soisson Theatre today in the film masterpiece of the world, "Neptune's Daughter." It is a gorgeous and thrilling spectacle in seven parts and presents a photoplay past belief. It is the hit of the season. The four reel Imp drama, "Court Martialled," has W. Welsh, Al Holubar, F. Nelson and H. Henly in the cast. It is a thrilling play. Tomorrow the beautiful actress, Theda Bara in the star feature in the five reel Alexander Dumas masterpiece, "The Clemenceau Case." Don't miss a good one.

FARMERS TO MEET

June Interest and Dividends.

The New York Journal of Commerce says that total interest and dividend disbursements in June will reach $111,213,101, against $120,-589,731 in June, 1914. Of this, stockholders will receive $15,913,104, a decrease of $12,176,330, due in large part to the passing of the dividend on United States Steel common. Interest payments will aggregate $88,300,000, an increase of $3,800,000, owing to the new bond and note issues.

TUESDAY EVENING, JUNE 8, 1915.

THE BREAD DAY FUND.

Connellsville made no pledge at the Pittsburg meeting for the relief of Belgium, but the fact should not prevent our people from doing a proper share for this deserving charity.

It has remained for a Morgan Valley citizen to start the fund. The Courier acknowledges his contribution and will be glad to receive any others that may be made. As already suggested in our columns we think the matter should be taken up by our leading civic body.

In the meantime send us your contributions. We will take care of them.

Connellsville ought to be good for the price of 500 sacks of flour for these desolated people if Uniontown is. Send in your checks and don't get writer's cramp when you come to inserting the amount.

THE TIMES AND THE CAUSES.

The efforts of the Democratic newspapers to deceive the people concerning the causes of the business depression which gripped the country when the Democratic Tariff law became operative in the fall of 1913 are amusing. The Uniontown New Freedom Standard, for example, goes on to explain at great length that the bad times were due to (1) the European war, (2) the suit to dissolve the United States Steel Corporation and (3) the long-delayed decision advancing freight rates. We are somewhat surprised that it does not mention the shutting down of the Sterling Sand Works at Masontown, but perhaps that was an oversight. The editor is a little overheated this week. The Standard goes on to say:

"The calamity howlers have done their worst and the people of the United States are beginning to see that the recent depression was unavoidable and that neither the Democratic administration nor the Democratic Tariff had a blessed thing to do with it. Throughout the country the feeling is pervasive that we are on the eve of a great business boom, which nothing can sidetrack unless it be war, and with a man like Wilson in the White House war is nothing more than a remote possibility."

If the Democratic Tariff had nothing to do with the shutting down of the mills and furnaces until the steel trade was reduced to 35% capacity and the Connellsville coke region to a similar state of depression, it is indeed, singular that these conditions took place immediately after the Democratic Tariff law went into effect, and that business did not show any signs of improvement until the demands of the nations engaged in the European War increased the country's export business to such an extent that our steel mills and coke ovens have been and their operations to over 70% and are still speeding up.

There is no better index of the industrial activity of the country than the operations of the Connellsville coke region. In 1912 and 1913, under the operation of the Republican Tariff law, this region produced over 20,000,000 tons of coke annually. The weekly average for the first three quarters of 1913 was 400,000 tons and for the last quarter of that year 343,000 tons, the year closing with weekly production at less than 300,000 tons. There was a slight recovery during the first quarter of 1914 due to the fact that the steel trade made a determined effort to do business under new conditions, but imports of foreign steel under the Democratic Tariff law, and the growing scarcity of home business, put a damper upon this patriotic optimism. The demand for steel and for coke dwindled and coke prices broke into bits. The weekly output of the Connellsville region dropped below 200,000 tons and remained at that point until the demands of the export trade caused by the European war started an upward movement which has grown until the coke output is over 380,000 tons again and we are threatened with a boom.

It is plain that the Democratic Tariff law caused our coke ovens to go out and the European war started them up again, so that the pertinent inquiry now is, After the war, what?

Our war business will cease, and it is the principal part of our export trade. With that gone, and our home market again threatened with foreign competition under the Democratic Tariff, we may not unreasonably fear a return of the conditions of 1914, unless in the meantime that Tariff law is replaced by a protective measure. It is pretty evident, however, that the American people have made up their minds on this score, and that the next administration will be Republican. The thought is assuring, and there is reason to think that the American manufacturer has already discovered that probability and is planning with the expectation of a renewal of the Republican policy of industrial encouragement.

OFFICIAL ADVERTISING.

The News tells us it spurns the newspaper patronage commonly called graft, "for divers reasons." The News never spurned patronage like this save when it couldn't be had. But to spurn it even then is bad taste, bad judgment and bad manners. When we fail to win the lady's favor, it is better to waft her a farewell kiss and hope for better luck. In the meantime, if we may be permitted to give a bit of friendly advice to the Connellsville News and the Uniontown Standard, we would suggest that they get some circulation with which to back up their persistent demands for official advertising. The News never had much circulation and The Standard lost most of the little it had when it changed its politics over night. The only real newspapers in the county are Republican newspaper. Though The Courier divides the afternoon field with three other papers it has twice the circulation of any of them, and easily maintains it on its merits as a newspaper without the aid of any gift enterprises. The official advertising of the county is being placed where it ought to be in justice to the taxpayers, that is to say in the newspapers of largest circulation.

THE FUTURE OF STEEL.

It is estimated that the peak of steel rail production has been reached in this country. The great railway systems have been built. There are no inducements to build others. The domestic steel rail demand of the future will be largely for renewals. The steel car industry, too, has reached its limit, owing to similar conditions.

Our expanding steel industry must look for foreign business. This will mean competition with large units and big capital. The Government attitude toward the steel industry has undergone a marked change and none too soon. The future policy of the country may involve reasonable restraint of large corporations, but not upon their great combinations for efficient and economical operation, which must be encouraged.

The News announces with a flourish that the Sterling Sand Company "has resumed." This industry is located up near Masontown and is controlled by the Sterling family. Whenever Chairman Sterling wants to hearten up the voters of Fayette county with the hope of better times, the Sterling Sand Company is started up. It has been started up so many times during the past year that we are led to suspect that it has a patent self-starter, warranted to start 'er every time she balks, which seems to be frequently. We are constrained to ask the starters to let 'er go this time, at least long enough to make a couple carloads of sand. That won't make a boom, but it will help some.

Speaking of editorial ability, the greatest editorial work of the New Freedom editor has been done with the scissors.

The attempt to quash the venire of June Jurors on the ground that they were not drawn strictly according to law is a matter of form rather than of substance. There is nothing wrong with the panel. The jurors drawn are "good men and true," and they are on the job. The objection to them is purely technical. It may be legally valid, but if so it will accomplish nothing but delay and a great deal of useless expense to the county. The trick is not new to legal practise, but the joke is always on the innocent taxpayers.

The argument which consists of epithet seldom has anything else behind it.

The announcement that Charles M. Schwab, the Bethlehem steelmaster, is organizing a big shipbuilding company for the purpose of building a merchant fleet for American foreign trade, indicates that one of President Wilson's greatest anxieties seems to be in a fair way of being solved by individual enterprise. The Schwab Shipbuilding Trust will be set down in the Government books as one of the Good Trusts.

The floor of the sea around Great Britain is fast becoming the biggest junk pile in the world.

The Mount Pleasant High School strike has been compromised. The flunking president of the class will be permitted a chance to make up his defective studies and in the meantime to graduate pro forma.

Shady Grove is an active proposition today.

The judgment of the Uniontown Standard as to editorial ability is not the best in the country, but if it is any consolation to our contemporary we will cheerfully admit that it is the muckmaster of Fayette county journalism.

Fayette county is suspected of hiding some natural gas in its midst.

Villa has asked for a conference with Carranza, and the Mexican troubles may take a step toward settlement, provided Carranza is not again imbued with the notion that he is "a bigger man than old Wilson."

Coarse abuse is not efficient journalism.

Anniversaries are in order. The Democratic sanctification of the Uniontown News Standard and the dedication of the Wicked Editor to a life of righteous Democratic endeavor should not be overlooked.

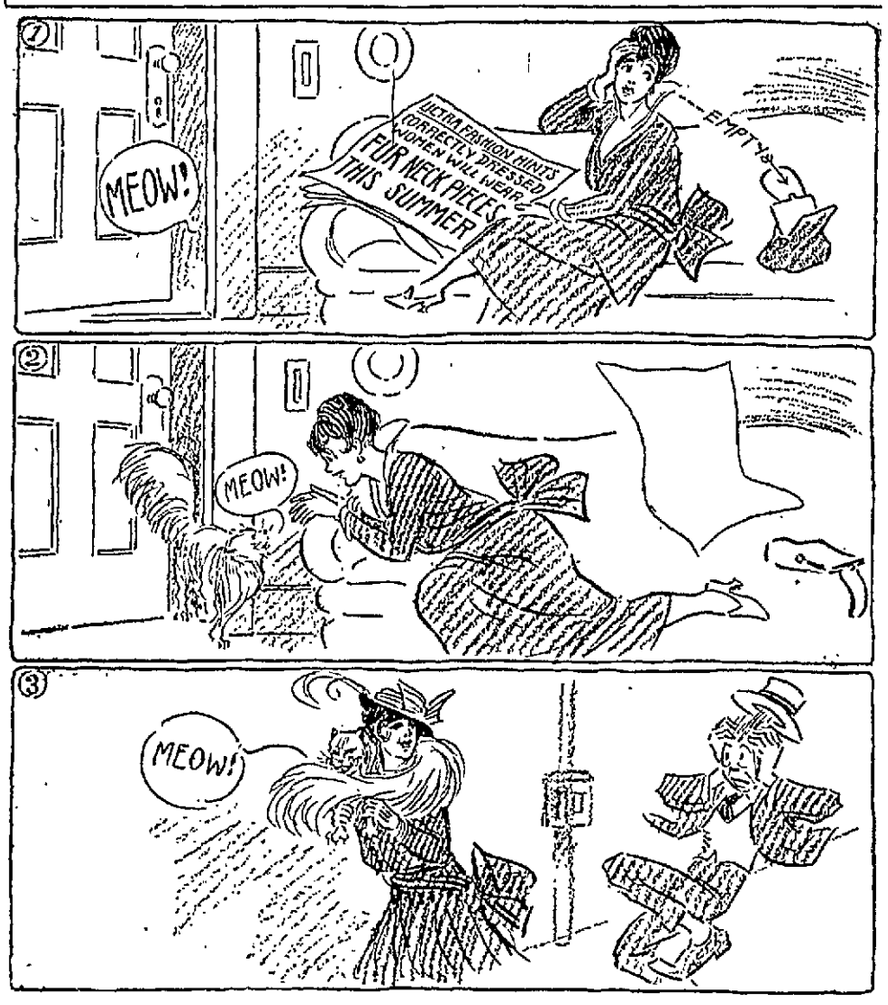
The German campaign in the East certainly had the push to it.

Singing in the Lane at one o'clock Sunday morning costs $3.50 in Connellsville. Singers should wait until daylight and sing in church. It's cheaper and better.

The city bonds have been signed up again, and hopes are again held out for a full city treasury and the beginning of active operations in street improvement.

The European war is marked by great activity among the airmen with the big and unwieldly Zeppelin getting the worst of it.

ANYTHING FOR STYLE—IN THREE REELS



Chicago

By GEORGE FITCH,
Author of "At Good Old Siwash."

The University of Chicago is an illustration of what America can do in a hurry when she sets her mind to it.

Twenty-five years ago this university consisted of an aged building, an extinct student body and a rate of progress which made a snail look like a Joy rider. About that time John D. Rockefeller decided to oil up the institution and presented it with a corn crib full of securities and William Rainey Harper and Amos Alonzo Stagg.

This was a master stroke. The money wouldn't have been worth much without Dr. Harper and Dr Harper would have had a hard time diverting the attention of the college freshman from Yale and Harvard without Stagg. The $10,000,000 built a fine collection of improved Gothic college buildings. Dr. Harper organized a great faculty and series of schools and Stagg turned out championship football teams with monotonous permanency. Within ten years the University of Chicago was so big that other Western schools were asking it to pick on something of its size, and it has been growing ever since.

Rockefeller kept on shipping so much money out to the institution that the freight rates on it were a heavy expense and many other Chicago people died patriotically and left fortunes to it. It now has a magnificent collection of buildings built on the quadrangle plan and facing the Midway Plaisance, which has quieted down a good deal since the World's Fair. It has about $39,000,000 in endowment, a library of half a million volumes and about 7,500 students, including many of the most talented Kickers, plungers and jumpers in the country.

Chicago is the only great American university built after a uniform plan of architecture and will be handsomer than Oxford some day when the tooth of time has nibbled at its buildings for a century or so. It is possible for the student at Chicago to spend 100 years in post graduate courses if he has time; and it is also possible for him to array himself in a maroon bag and a loud yell and watch his team take bites out of Wisconsin, Cornell and other prominent institutions of learning and exercise. The old football games between Michigan and Chicago were the greatest games in the West and the long peace which has existed between these two institutions is almost as deeply regretted as the present lack of peace in Europe.

NEWS OF A DAY IN AND AROUND SCOTTDALE TOWN

Camping Fever is Beginning to Manifest Itself Among Many.

SOME GOING TO NEAR LIGONIER

More Will Take Other Places; Men's Bible Class Has Fest at Their Social and Business Meeting; Connellsville People on the Program.

Special to The Courier.

SCOTTDALE, June 8.—There is much talk of camp life now going on, and Scottdale will send about as large delegations to the mountains as any town of its size in Western Pennsylvania. The Presbyterians, of course, are well provided with their bungalows at Bearing Run, and their camp schedule is about filled for the summer months they say. The Young Men's Christian Association camp will be well patronized, about 20 boys having joined the camp. The Methodist boys will camp at Ohiopyle, and there will be about a score of them, under charge of Samuel B. Reed.

The Young Men's Christian Association camp will be on Loyalhanna creek, near Ligonier, and will be managed by James H. Sourbier of the Greensburg association, with which the Scottdale association will be combined. Charles D. Flagle will be director of religious and social activities, and Howard McMackin, physical director of the Scottdale association, will be the director of the games and athletics. This camp will be in operation July 12 to 31, both inclusive.

The following requisition of necessary articles is given, good for any camp: Woolen sweater, change of underwear, two pairs of stockings, Jersey and running pants, outing flannel pajamas, handkerchiefs, two pairs of woolen blankets, Turkish towels, soap, comb and brush, toothbrush, safety pins, needle and threads, buttons, knife, fork, spoons, dinner and soup plate, cereal bowl and cup, porcelain, ware best, twine or rope, fishing tackle, stamped envelopes and postal cards, strong pocket knife, small Bible, and bathing tights.

Listed as desirable things are a cheap watch, flashlight, baseball outfit, games, candles, mosquito netting, clothes pins, small pillow, poncho or rain coat.

UNIQUE MEETING.

The first social and business meeting of the Men's Bible Class of the Methodist Episcopal Sunday school was a unique entertainment on Monday evening, when about 50 of the members gathered together to see what the Volunteer boats, James L. Reynolds and H. A. Ringler, had for them. President J. T. Brindler presided, and after discussing some class matters, the program of the evening began. Miss Elizabeth Williams appeared in three humorous readings that pleased everyone. James G. Hicks of Connellsville, aged 76, and his son, William J. Hicks, sang a couple of duets that were greatly appreciated. Then the crowd went to the class room where on two large tables, with three big baskets of flowers there were baskets of sandwiches and pickles which were passed around. Misses Olive Bloom and Florence Lockard presided at the coffee tanks. During this feature of the social there were about 100 sacks of popcorn which Mr. Ringler had prepared given out. When volunteers were called upon to entertain the class on July 12, W. M. Edwards, R. P. Hill, R. M. Young and Robert L. Hill volunteered to take this up, and will furnish the program and entertain.

CUT BY SHEETS.

Howard Berger, an employe of the mills, while catching a piece of sheet-iron Monday afternoon, had the iron slip and it cut him severely beside the left eye. The cut was just on the edge of the eye, and that organ had a very narrow escape from being put out.

MEYERSDALE.

MEYERSDALE, June 8.—Alexander E. Shumaker died Sunday morning, June 6, 1915, at 10.30 o'clock at the family residence, corner Front and Beachley streets, South Side. He was the eldest son of Abraham and Mahala (Snyder) Shumaker, both deceased, and was born July 17, 1847, in Upper Turkeyfoot township, Somerset county, being aged at the time of his death 67 years, 10 months and 19 days.

Early in youth with his parents he removed to Meyers Mills (now Meyersdale) and had since resided here with the exception of several years spent at Livermood's Mill (now Boyton), where he operated the grist mill in the early seventies. At the time of his enlistment, February 3, 1865, at Chambersburg, he was a mere lad of 16 years. December 23, 1864, he was wounded, and again April 6, 1865, he was wounded at the engagement of Five Forks, but did not enter the hospital for either. In 1901 he was detailed to carry dispatches from Marthasburg to New Market. He saw some very severe service and participated in the battles of New Market, Lynchburg, Winchester, Fisher's Hill, Petersburg, Cedar Creek, and was present at Lee's surrender at Appomattox. He was discharged from the service July 21, 1865, at Philadelphia. DUNBAR.

DUNBAR, June 8.—Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Greaves gave a delightful surprise party Saturday evening in honor their daughter, Minnie, in being her 20th birthday anniversary. Games of various kinds were played. At a late hour luncheon was served after which the guests departed for their homes, wishing Minnie many more happy birthdays. ITCHING ECZEMA COVERED ENTIRE BODY, RESINOL CURED

Could Not Sleep, 8 Remedies had Failed. Resinol Stopped Itching Immediately.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 11, 1914.—"My entire body, even my eyelids, was completely covered with blisters as large as a pea. When one would burst water would come from it, and then it would turn into a very painful sore. The burning and itching were something terrible, and I COULD NOT SLEEP nor rest. I think I had one of the worst cases of eczema a human being ever had.

"I used eight different kinds of remedies without success. I then tried Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap and it stopped the itching IMMEDIATELY. I gradually noticed a change for the better. Now I am entirely cured, and am without a pimple or blemish on any part of my body."—(Signed) Edward F. McCullough, 240 River St., Mattapan. A Personal Word

Beginning Friday, June the 11th and continuing throughout the month we will start a series of sales, which will be very advantageous to the public.

This event was originated and planned by me personally. Manufacturers whom we have dealt with for years and whose friendship I hold personally, have been most generous with good things for this occasion; have also secured the most enthusiastic support from our New York buying office located at 315 Fourth Avenue, New York, who are buyers for over one hundred of the best stores in the country—an organization of 50 men and women, every one experts in their respective lines, and always ready to pick the plums of the market, every hour in the day.

Have also personally co-operated with each and every department manager and saw to it that the items selected for this sale should be of such a character that they are bound to bring results.

Yours with double values, to double the sales in June,

ALFRED J. KOBACKER.

THE TULLE RUFF ALWAYS LENDS ITS TOUCH OF FORMALITY.

One of the valuable distinctive touches for a simple costume that must be made formal for a special occasion is a neckruff of tulle. This accessory always conveys the suggestion of formality and dressiness—it is never part of an every-day costume and its value is realized by the woman who must make a small dress allowance go a long way. By means of a taupe grey tulle ruff and a dainty hat of white hemp and ostrich with two pink roses coquettishly placed, a simple little white lace blouse has here been made suitable for a restaurant dinner.

FRENCH DRESS FOR A LITTLE TOT.

Today's charming little figure shows a design for a dainty little French frock with decided originality. Lengths of embroidered edging are used for the yoke or, more correctly speaking, the short waist—and sleeves and these are joined with val lace insertion. From this yoke hangs a double skirt, or skirt and tunic, both of fine batiste, and laid in box plaits. A pretty and effective design in scallops of lace finishes the tunic which is edged with a narrow ruffle of lace. A sash of blue satin is threaded beneath the pleats of the lower skirt and tied in a bow at the left side.

Happy Days Soon

Oh, the summer days are coming,
And the bees will soon be humming,
Where the clover tops are nodding in the sun;
And the breezes will be straying
'Mongst the shadows lightly playing,
While they hover where the murmuring waters run.
The rainbow will be bending,
All its colors gladly lending
To the blossoms that are smiling at the sky;
As their perfume they are flinging
Through the sunshine and the singing,
And perhaps we'll all be happy by and by.

When the calendar discloses
June amid the dewy roses
As the robin whistles jauntily and clear;
When the moon is brightly glowing
And the silver river flowing
Sings a melody the starlight stops to hear;
Then the earth that seems so fretful
Will grow gentle and forgetful
Of the faults and follies that have made us sick.
Summer days are drawing near us,
Once again to charm and cheer us,
And perhaps we'll all be happy by and by.

FINDS IN STRANGER HER UNKNOWN SISTER.

Live In Same Town, but Not Aware They Are Related.

Separated when babies and living over thirty years without the knowledge that the other existed, two sisters, Mrs. B. L. Ogilvie of Weston, Mass., and Mrs. Robert T. Woodruff of Squantum, Mass., have just made each other's acquaintance.

The women are the daughters of the late Frank Arrington of Salem, Mass., who died a year ago. In 1884, when Mrs. Ogilvie, then Delcie Arrington, was three years of age and her sister, Constance, thirteen months, their mother died. The father allowed the younger one to be adopted by Mr. and Mrs. Benamin Sanborn of Wellesley.

Legally adopted the baby became Alice Sanborn, and five years ago she married Robert T. Woodruff, a Lynn lawyer. Delcie lived with her father in Salem and left him to become the wife of B. L. Ogilvie, a Weston grain merchant. They have five children and the Woodruffs one.

The knowledge that Mrs. Ogilvie had a sister came to her in a peculiar manner. While on his deathbed her father was visited by his sister, who came east for the first time in twenty-three years. During her stay in Salem she casually asked Mrs. Ogilvie if she had heard anything of her sister Constance.

As her father was too sick to be asked Mrs. Ogilvie learned from her aunt the brief facts of the early separation. Then she began a long search which ended in finding the adoption papers.

One of the curious features of the case is that for a while both sisters lived in Wellesley. Before her marriage Mrs. Ogilvie worked in the same town where her sister was going to school and, though the two looked so much alike, they never met there.

GRAY CLOTH BRITISH PUZZLE.

Enormous Exports From England of Material Used Only by Germans.

England is greatly puzzled by the fact that in the three months ending March 31 British mills exported 1,277,835 yards of unbleached gray cotton cloth as compared with only 170,684 yards for the same period in 1914. Nor does the board of trade report indicate where this great quantity of gray cloth went. None of the allies uses gray cloth for uniforms, but the Germans do.

Nor is there less mystery in the circumstance that in the same three months British merchants have sold to Holland and Sweden 13,603,008 pounds of coffee as against only 3,723,704 pounds in the first quarter of last year, 11,824,825 pounds of cocoa as against 4,765,095 pounds, 6,068,535 pounds of tea against 2,037,221 pounds, 3,566,194 gallons of gasoline against only 631,803 gallons and 19,604 tons of oilseed against only 473 tons.

GETS CHECK FOR $16,150,000

With It Steel Company Receives British Order For 8,000 Cannon.

The Bethlehem Steel company has received an order for 8,000 cannon from Lord Kitchener, head of the British war office. The order was accompanied by a check for $16,150,000 partly for work already done for the British government and partly in advance for the new field pieces.

The cannon ordered are fieldpieces that can be turned out in about a month.

Shrapnel is now being turned out at Bethlehem at the rate of 12,000 shells a day, and of one pounder and smaller shells the product is 50,000 and upward every twenty-four hours.

WRIST WATCH BATTLE PERIL

Armies May Forbid Them Because Many Arms Are Lost.

The wrist watch is found in all the armies in the war, and they are very frequently hit.

When high velocity bullets strike it fairly the effect is to shatter the watch into unrecognizable fragments. These are often driven into the bones of the wrist, hand or forearm, and the resulting damage is so radical that no treatment can restore the use of the arm.

Many of these injuries have been reported in the German army, and prohibition of the wrist watch altogether is likely to be adopted.

Public Penance.

A quaint old law for the punishment of petty offenders exists to this day in Middleburg, the Netherlands, and anything resembling it is not known to exist elsewhere. Owing to dampness weeds quickly spring up in the streets between the paving stones, and here, under the eye of a none too severe guard, the offenders are put to work with a large trowel shaped knife clearing away the upspringing blades of green. Each is provided with a wooden stool; hence it may be imagined that they are not hard driven. Here men and women alike who have been convicted work in this manner.

Joy of Anticipation.

The youngest girl of a Baltimore family was recently much distressed at dessert to discover that there was ice cream for dinner.

"Oh, papa," exclaimed the youngster reproachfully, "why didn't they tell me this morning that we were going to have ice cream?"

"What difference would that have made?"

"Lots," sighed the child. "I could have expected it all day."—Exchange.

Drink Plenty of Water.

A Roumanian scientist claims that any one can live to be 100 years old, barring accidents, if he drinks enough water. He declares he has discovered that old age is due to a decrease in the amount of water in the system and that Father Time may be checkmated by systematic water drinking during middle age.

Buying Wives.

Wives are still obtained by purchase in some parts of Russia. In the district of Kamyshin, on the Volga, this is practically the only way in which marriages are brought about. The price of a pretty girl from a well to do family ranges from $100 to $200.

Loneliness is an all pervading consciousness of self.

The FORESTER'S DAUGHTER

Copyright, 1914, by Hamlin Garland

The youth's frank words and his sympathetic voice disarmed McFarlane completely. Even the slight resentment he felt melted away. "It's no use saying 'if,'" he remarked at length. "What we've got to meet is Seth Belden's report—Berrie has cut loose from Cliff, and he's red headed already. When he drops on to this story, when he learns that I had to chase back after the horses and that you and Berrie were alone together for three days, he'll have a fine club to swing, and he'll swing it, and Alec will help him. They're all waiting a chance to get me, and they're mean enough to get me through my girl."

"What can I do?" asked Wayland.

McFarlane pondered. "I'll try to head off Marin Belden and I'll have a talk with Moore. He's a pretty reasonable chap."

"But you forget there's another tale bearer. Moore's daughter is with them."

"That's so. I'd forgotten her. Good Lord, we are in for it! There's no use trying to cover anything up."

Here was the place for Norcross to speak up and say, "Never mind, I'm going to ask Berrie to be my wife." But he couldn't do it. Something rose in his throat which prevented speech. A strange repugnance, a kind of sullen resentment at being forced into a declaration kept him silent, and McFarlane, disappointed, wondering and hurt, kept silence also.

Norcross was the first to speak. "Of course those who know your daughter will not listen for an instant to the story of an unclean old thing like Mrs. Belden."

"I'm not so sure about that," replied the father gloomily. "People always listen to such stories, and a girl always gets the worst of a situation like this. Berrie's been brought up to take care of herself, and she's kept clear of criticism so far, but with Cliff on edge and this old rip snooping around"— His mind suddenly changed. "Your being the son of a rich man won't help any. Why didn't you tell me who you were?"

"I didn't think it necessary. What difference does it make? I have nothing to do with my father's business. His notions of forest speculation are not mine."

"It would have made a difference with me, and it might have made a difference with Berrie. She mightn't have been so free with you at the start if she'd known who you were. You looked sick and kind of lonesome, and that worked on her sympathy."

"I was sick and I was lonesome, and she has been very sweet and lovely to me, and it breaks my heart to think that her kindness and your friendship should bring all this trouble and suspicion upon her. Let's go up to the Moore camp and have it out with them. I'll make any statement you think best."

"I reckon the less said about it the better," responded the older man. "I'm going up to the camp, but not to talk about my daughter."

"How can you help it? They'll force the topic."

"If they do I'll force them to let it alone," retorted McFarlane, but he went away disappointed and sorrowful.

When the supervisor returned from the camp something in his manner revealed the fact that the situation had not improved.

"They forced me into a corner," he said peevishly. "I lied out of one night, but they know that you were here last night. Of course they were respectful enough so long as I had an eye on them, but their tongues are wagging now."

As bedtime drew near Settle took a blanket and went to the corral, and Berrie insisted that her father and Wayland occupy the bunk.

Norcross protested, but the supervisor said: "Let her alone. She's better able to sleep on the floor than either of us."

This was perfectly true; but, in spite of his bruised and aching body, the youth would gladly have taken her place beside the stove. It seemed pitifully unjust that she should have this physical hardship in addition to her uneasiness of mind.

Berea suffered a restless night, the most painful and broken she had known in all her life. She acknowledged that Sloan Moore was prettier and that she stood more nearly on Wayland's plane than herself, but the realization of this fact did not bring surrender. She was not of that temper. All her life she had been called upon to combat the elements, to hold her own amid rude men and inconsiderate women, and she had no intention of yielding her place to a pert coquette, no matter what the gossips might say.

"She shall not have her way with Wayland," she decided. "I know what she wants—she wants him at her side tomorrow. But I will not have it so. She is trying to get him away from me."

The more she dwelt on this the hotter her jealous fever burned. The floor on which she lay was full of knots. She could not lose herself in sleep, tired as she was. The planks no longer turned their soft spots to her flesh, and she rolled from side to side in torment.

Her plan of action was simple. "I shall go home tomorrow and take Wayland with me. I will not have him going with that girl; that's settled."

The hard trip of the day before had seemingly done him no permanent injury. On the contrary, a few hours' rest had almost restored him to his normal self. "Tomorrow he will be able to ride again." And this thought reconciled her to her hard bed. She did not look beyond the long, delicious day which they must spend in returning to the Springs.

She fell asleep at last and was awakened only by her father tinkering about the stove.

CHAPTER XI.

The Camp on the Pass.

As soon as she was alone with her father Berrie said, "I'm going home today, dad."

"Going home! What for?"

"I've had enough of it."

He glanced at her shod on the floor. "I can't say I blame you any."

"Oh, I don't mind sleeping on the floor," she replied. "But I want to get back. I don't want to meet those women. Another thing, you'd better use Mr. Norcross at the Springs instead of leaving him here with Tony."

"Why so?"

"Well, he isn't quite well enough to run the risk. It's a long way from here to a doctor."

"He 'pears to be on deck this morning. Besides, I haven't anything in the office to offer him."

"Then send him up to Meeker. Landon needs help, and he's a better forester than Tony anyway."

"I don't know but you're right. Landon is almost as good a hustler as Tony and a much better forester. I thought of sending Norcross up there at first, but he told me that Frank and his gang had it in for him. Of course he's only nominally in the service, but I want him to begin right."

Berrie went further. "I want him to ride back with me today."

He looked at her with grave inquiry. "Do you think that a wise thing to do? Won't that make more talk?"

"We'll start early and ride straight through."

"You'll have to go by Lost lake, and that means a long, hard hike. Can he stand it?"

"If I find we can't make it I'll pull into a ranch. But I'm sure we can."

When Wayland came in the supervisor inquired, "Do you feel able to ride back over the hill today?"

"Entirely so. It isn't the riding that uses me up, it is the walking, and, besides, as a candidate for promotion I must obey orders—especially orders to march."

They breakfasted hurriedly and while McFarlane and Tony were bringing in the horses Wayland and Berrie set the cabin to rights. Working thus side by side, she recovered her dominion over him and at the same time regained her own cheerful self confidence.

"You're a wonder!" he exclaimed as he watched her deft adjustment of the dishes and furniture. "You're ambidextrous."

"I have to be to hold my job," she laughingly replied. "A feller must play all the parts when he's up here."

It was still early morning as they mounted and set off up the trail, but Moore's camp was astir, and as McFarlane turned in—much against Berrie's will—the lumberman and his daughter both came out to meet them. "Come in and have some breakfast," said Sloan, with cordial inclusiveness, while her eyes met Wayland's glance with mocking glee.

"Thank you," said McFarlane, "we can't stop. I'm going to set my daughter over the divide. She has had enough camping, and Norcross is pretty well battered up, so I'm going to help them across. I'll be back tonight and we'll take our turn up the valley tomorrow. Nash will be here then."

Berrie did not mind her father's explanation. On the contrary, she took a distinct pleasure in letting the other girl know of the long and intimate day she was about to spend with her young lover.

Sloan, too adroit to display her disappointment, expressed polite regret. "I hope you won't get storm bound," she said, showing her white teeth in a meaning smile.

"If there is any sign of a storm we won't cross," declared McFarlane. "We're going round by the lower pass, anyhow. If I'm not here by dark you may know I've stayed to set 'em down at the mill."

There was charm in Sloan's alert poise and in the neatness of her camp dress. Her dainty tent, with its stools and rugs, made the wilderness seem but a park. She reminded Norcross of the troops of tourists of the Tyrol, and her tent was of a kind to harmonize with the tea houses on the path to the summit of the Matterhorn. Then, too, something triumphantly feminine shone in her bright eyes and glowed in her softly rounded cheeks. Her hand was little and pointed, not fitted like Berrie's for tightening a cinch or wielding an ax, and as he said "Goodby" he added, "I hope I shall see you again soon," and at the moment he meant it.

"You're a wonder!" he exclaimed.

"We'll return to the Springs in a few days," she replied. "Come and see us. Our bungalow is on the other side of the river. And you too," she addressed Berrie, but her tone was so conventionally polite that the ranch girl, burning with jealous heat, made no reply.

McFarlane led the way to the lake rapidly and in silence. The splendors of the foliage, subdued by the rains; the grandeur of the peaks, the song of the glorious stream, all were lost on Berrie, for she now felt herself to be nothing but a big, clumsy, coarse handed tomboy. Her worn gloves, her faded skirt and her man's shoes had been made hateful to her by that smug, graceful, play acting tourist with the cool, keen eyes and smirking lips. "She pretends to be a kitten, but she isn't. She's a sly grownup cat," she bitterly accused, but she could not deny the charm of her personality.

Wayland was forced to acknowledge that Berrie in this dark mood was not the delightful companion she had hitherto been. Something sweet and confiding had gone out of their relationship, and he was too keen witted not to know what it was. He estimated precisely the value of the malicious parting words of Sloan Moore.

That Berrie was suffering and that her jealousy touchingly proved the depth of her love for him brought no elation, only perplexity. He was not seeking such devotion. As a companion on the trail she had been a joy; as a jealous sweetheart she was less admirable. He realized perfectly that this return journey was of her arrangement, not McFarlane's, and, while he was not resentful of her care, he was in doubt of the outcome. It hurried him into a further intimacy which might prove embarrassing.

At the camp by the lake the supervisor became sharply commanding. "Now, let's throw these packs on live ly. It will be slippery on the high trail, and you'll just naturally have to hit leather hard and keep jouncing if you reach the wagon road before dark But you'll make it."

"Make it!" said Berrie. "Of course we'll make it Don't you worry about that for a minute. Once I get out of the green timber the dark won't worry me. We'll push right through."

In packing the camp stuff on the saddles Berrie, almost as swift and powerful as her father, acted with perfect understanding of every task, and Wayland's admiration of her skill increased mightily.

She insisted on her father's turning back. "We don't need you," she said. "I can find the pass."

McFarlane's faith in his daughter had been tested many times, and yet he was a little loath to have her start off on a trail new to her. He argued against it briefly, but she laughed at his fears. "I can go anywhere you can," she said. "Stand clear!" With final admonition he stood clear.

"Goodby!" he called. "If you meet Nash hurry him along. Moore is anxious to run those lines. Keep in touch with Landon, and if anybody turns up from the district office say I'll be back on Friday. Good luck!"

"Same to you. So long!"

Berea led the way, and Norcross fell in behind the pack horses, feeling as unimportant as a small boy at the heels of a circus parade. His girl captain was so competent, so self reliant and so sure that nothing he could say or do assisted in the slightest degree. Her leadership was a curiously close reproduction of her father's unhurried and graceful action. Her seat in the saddle was as easy as Landon's, and her eyes were alert to every rock and stream in the road. She was at home here, where the other girl would have been a bewildered child, and his words of praise lifted the shadow from her face.

Wayland called out, "The air feels like Thanksgiving morning, doesn't it?"

"It is Thanksgiving for me, and I'm going to get a grouse for dinner," she replied, and in less than an hour the snap of her rifle made good her promise.

After leaving the upper lake she turned to the right and followed the course of a swift and splendid stream which came churning through a cheerless, mossy swamp of spruce trees. Inexperienced as he was, Wayland knew that this was not a well marked trail, but his confidence in his guide was too great to permit of any worry over the pass, and he amused himself by watching the water robins as they flitted from stone to stone in the torrent, and in calculating just where he would drop a line for trout if he had time to do so, and in recovered serenity enjoyed his ride. Gradually he put aside his perplexities concerning the future, permitting his mind to prefigure nothing but his duties with Landon at Meeker's mill.

He was rather glad of the decision to send him there, for it promised absorbing sport. "I shall see how Landon and Belden work out their problem," he said. He had no fear of Frank Meeker now. "As a forest guard with official duties to perform I can meet that young savage on other and more nearly equal terms," he assured himself.

The trail grew slimmery and in places ran full of water. "But there's a bottom somewhere," Berrie confidently declared, and pushed ahead with resolute mien. It was noon when they rose above timber and entered upon the wide, smooth slopes of the pass. Snow filled the grass here, and the wind, keen, cutting, unhindered, came o-r of the desolate west with savage fury, but the sun occasionally shone through the clouds with vivid splendor. "It is December now," shouted Wayland as he put on his slicker and cowered low to his saddle. "It will be January soon."

"We will make it Christmas dinner," she laughed, and her glowing good humor warmed his heart. She was entirely her cheerful self again.

As they rose the view became magnificent, wintry, sparkling. The great clouds, drifting like ancient warships heavy with armament, sent down chill showers of hail over the frosted gold of the grassy slopes, but when the shadows passed the sunlight descended in silent cataracts deliciously springlike. The conies squeaked from the rocky ridges and a brace of eagles circling about a lone crag, as if exulting in their sovereign mastery of the air, screamed in shrill ecstatic duo. The sheer cliffs on their shadowed sides were violently purple. Everywhere the landscape exhibited crashing contrasts of primary pigments which bit into consciousness like the flare of a martial band.

It was nearly 2 o'clock when they began to drop down behind the rocky ridges of the eastern slope, and soon, in the bottom of a warm and sheltered hollow just at timber line, Berrie drew her horse to stand and slipped from the saddle. "We'll rest here an hour," she said, "and cook our grouse, or are you too hungry to wait?"

"I can wait," he answered dramatically. "But it seems as if I had never eaten."

"Well, then, we'll save the grouse till tomorrow, but I'll make some coffee. You bring some water while I start a fire."

And so, while the tired horses cropped the russet grass, she boiled some coffee and laid out some bread and meat, while he sat by watching her and absorbing the beauty of the scene, the charm of the hour. "It is exactly like a warm afternoon in April," he said, "and here are some of the spring flowers."

"There now, sit by and eat," she said, with humor, and in perfectly restored tranquillity they ate and drank, with no thought of critics or of rivals. They were alone, and content to be so.

It was deliciously sweet and restful there in that sunny hollow on the breast of the mountain. The wind swept through the worn branches of the dwarfed spruce with immemorial wistfulness, but these young souls heard it only as a far off song. Side by side on the soft Alpine clover they rested and talked, looking away at the shining peaks, and down over the dark green billows of fir beneath them. Half the forest was under their eyes at the moment, and the man said: "Is it not magnificent! It makes me proud of my country. Just think, all this glorious spread of hill and valley is under your father's direction—I may say under your direction, for I notice he does just about what you tell him to do."

"You've noticed that?" she laughed. "If I were a man I'd rather be supervisor of this forest than congressman."

"So would I," he agreed. "Nash says you are the supervisor. I wonder if your father realizes how efficient you are? Does he ever sorrow over your not being a boy?"

Her eyes shone with mirth. "Not that I can notice. He 'pears contented."

"You're a good deal like a son to him, I imagine. You can do about all that a boy can do, anyhow—more than I could ever do. Does he realize how much you have to do with the management of his forest? I've never seen your like. I really believe you could carry on the work as well as he."

She flushed with pleasure. "You seem to think I'm a district forester in disguise."

"I have eyes, Miss Supervisor, and also ears, which leads me to ask, Why don't you clean out that saloon gang? Landon is sure there's crooked work going on at that mill—certainly that open bar is a disgraceful and corrupting thing."

Her face clouded. "We've tried to cut out that saloon, but it can't be done. You see, it's on a patented claim. The claim was bogus, of course, and we've made complaint, but the matter is hung up and that gives 'em a chance to go on."

"Well, let's not talk of that. It's too delicious an hour for any question of business. It is a moment for poetry. I wish I could write what I feel this moment. Why don't we camp here and watch the sun go down and the moon rise? From our lofty vantage ground the coming of dawn would be an epic."

"We mustn't think of that," she protested. "We must be going."

"Not yet. The hour is too perfect. It may never come again. The wind in the pines, the sunshine, the conies crying from their rocks, the butterflies on the clover—my heart aches with the beauty of it. It's been a wonderful trip. Even that staggering walk in the rain had its splendid quality. I couldn't see the poetry in it then, but I do now. These few days have made us comrades, haven't they—comrades of the trail?"

CHAPTER XII.

The Death Grapple.

"YOU have been very considerate of me, Miss Supervisor." Wayland took her hand. "I've never seen such hands. They are like steel and yet they are feminine."

She drew her hands away. "I'm ashamed of my hands—they are so big and rough and dingy."

"They're brown, of course, and calloused—a little—but they are not big and they are beautifully modeled." He looked at the girl of the forest speculatively. "I am wondering how you would look in conventional dress."

"Do you mean"— She hesitated. "I'd look like a gawk in one of those low necked outfits. I'd never dare—and those tight skirts would sure cripple me."

"Oh, no, they wouldn't. You'd have to modify your stride a little, but you'd negotiate it. You're equal to anything."

"You're making fun of me!"

"No, I'm not. I'm in earnest. You're the kind of American girl that can go anywhere and do anything. My sisters would mortgage their share of the golden streets for your abounding health—and so would I."

"You are all right now," she smiled. "You don't look or talk as you did."

"It's this sunlight." He lifted a spread hand as if to clutch and hold something. "I feel it soaking into me like some magical oil. No more moping and whining for me. I've proved that hardship is good for me."

"Don't crow till you're out of the woods. It's a long ride down the hill and going down is harder on the tenderfoot than going up."

"I'm no longer a tenderfoot. All I need is another trip like this with you and I shall be a master trailer."

All this was very sweet to her, and though she knew they should be going she lingered. Childishly reckless of the sinking sun, she played with the wild flowers at her side and listened to his voice in complete content. He was right. The hour was too beautiful to be shortened, although she saw no reason why others equally delightful might not come to them both. He was more of the lover than he had ever been before, that she knew, and in the light of his eyes all that was not girlish and charming melted away. She forgot her heavy shoes, her rough hands and sun tanned face and listened with wondering joy and pride to his words, which were of a fineness such as she had never heard spoken—only books contained such unusual and exquisite phrases.

A cloud passing across the sun flung down a shadow of portentous chill and darkness. She started to her feet with startled recollection of the place and the hour.

"We must be going—at once!" she commanded.

"Not yet," he pleaded. "It's only a cloud. The sun is coming out again. I have perfect confidence in your woodcraft. Why not spend another night on the trail? It may be our last trip together."

He tempted her strongly, so frank and boyish and lovable were his glances and his words. But she was vaguely afraid of herself, and though the long ride at the moment seemed hard and dull the thought of her mother waiting decided her action.

"No, no!" she responded firmly. "We have wasted too much time already. We must ride."

He looked up at her with challenging glance. "Suppose I refuse—suppose I decide to stay here?"

Upon her as he talked a sweet hesitation fell, a dream which held more of happiness than she had ever known. "It is a long, hard ride," she thought, "and another night on the trail will not matter." And so the moments passed on velvet feet, and still she lingered, reluctant to break the spell.

Suddenly into their idyllic drowse of content, so sweet, so youthful and so pure of heart, broke the sound of a horse's hurrying, clashing steel shod feet, and, looking up, Berrie saw a mounted man coming down the mountain side with furious, reckless haste.

"It is Cliff!" she cried out. "He's on our trail!" And into her face came a look of alarm. Her lips paled; her eyes widened. "He's mad—he's dangerous! Leave him to me," she added.

There was something so sinister in the rider's disregard of stone and tree and pace, something so menacing in the forward thrust of his body, that Berrie was able to divine his wrath and was smitten into irresolution, all her hardy, boyish self reliance swallowed up in the weakness of the woman. She forgot the pistol at her belt and awaited the assault with rigid pose.

As Belden neared them Norcross also perceived that the rider's face was distorted with passion and that his glance was not directed upon Berrie, but upon himself, and he braced himself for the attack.

Leaving his saddle with one flying leap, which the cowboy practices at play, Belden buried himself upon his rival with the fury of a panther.

The slender youth went down before the big rancher as though struck by a catapult, and the force of his fall against the stony earth stunned him so that he lay beneath his enemy as helpless as a child.

Belden snarled between his teeth, "I told you I'd kill you, and I will!"

But this was not to be. Berea suddenly recovered her native force. With a cry of pain, of anger, she flung herself on the maddened man's back. Her hands encircled his neck like a collar of bronze.

"Let go!" she commanded, with deadly intensity. "Let go or I'll choke the life out of you! Let go, I say!"

HIGHER WAGES AND SHORTER HOURS FOR THE STEEL WORKERS

U. S. Bureau of Labor Shows Generally Improved Conditions.

FEWER SEVEN-DAY TURNS NOW

At Many Mills Relief Crews are Employed in Order that Employes May Have One Rest Day a Week; Report Covers Many Branches of Industry.

The United States Bureau of Labor Statistics has just issued a report (Bulletin 156) on wages and hours of labor in the principal productive occupations in nine departments of the iron and steel industry of the United States for the year 1915. This is in continuation of a previous report on the same subject (Bulletin 151), data from which are incorporated in the present report for the sake of comparison, thus presenting a complete statement as to rates of wages per hour, hours of labor per week, and full-time weekly earnings from 1907 to 1914 for three departments, and from 1910 to 1913 for six departments. The report is based on data for May in each year, obtained from the pay rolls of representative establishments in the various centers of the industry.

A marked increase in the rates of pay in the iron and steel industry was made in the early part of 1913. As a result, in the three departments for which reports for seven years have been obtained—blast furnaces, Bessemer converters, and bar mills—full-time weekly earnings in 1913, as shown by a combination of earnings in the principal productive occupations, were from 6.6 to 26.4 per cent higher than in any one of the six years preceding. In the remaining six departments covered by the report—open hearth furnaces, blooming mills, plate mills, standard rail mills, sheet mills, and tin plate mills—for which reports have been obtained back to 1910 only, full-time weekly earnings in 1913 were from 3.8 to 13.3 per cent higher than in any one of the three years preceding.

Wages per hour in 1913 show a greater per cent of increase over 1907 or 1910 than do weekly earnings, as the latter were materially affected by the reduction in hours of labor. In the selected occupations combined, for the blast furnace, Bessemer, and bar mill departments there are reductions in hours of labor per week of from 1.6 to 2.9 per cent between 1907 and 1913, and, except open hearth furnaces and plate mills, all departments show a reduction in hours between 1910 and 1913.

There was a marked decrease in seven-day work between 1907 and 1913, many establishments having put into effect a plan whereby relief gangs were provided to take the place of regular employees and thus give each employee in seven-day occupations one day of rest in each week. Blast furnaces, which must be in continuous operation day and night seven days per week, naturally show a greater decrease in seven-day work than any other department. The proportion of seven-day workers in the principal productive occupations of blast furnaces fell from 97.2 per cent in 1907 to 79.8 per cent in 1913—a reduction of 17.4 per cent. In the Bessemer converting department, the reduction of seven-day workers was 13.3 per cent between 1907 (24.1) and 1917 (10.3). At open hearth furnaces, the proportion of seven-day work varies according to the volume of business done and in this one department there was a slight increase (2.1 per cent) in 1913 as compared with 1910. In blooming mills there was a reduction of 5.5 per cent between 1910 and 1913, and in other departments the proportion of seven-day work is very small.

The wide range of full-time weekly earnings in the iron and steel industry is shown by the following list, including a few of the unskilled, semi-skilled, and skilled occupations for 1913, selected from the various departments:

Blast furnaces: Laborers, $12.43; Keepers, $19.13; Blowers, $26.34; Blooming mills: Bottom makers helpers, $19.37; Manipulators, $27.60; Heaters, $44.18

Bar mills: Bundlers, $14.05; Roughers, $26.00; Rollers, $60.71.

Bessemer converters: Mold cappers, $20.28; Steel pourers, $33.94; Vesselmen, $44.09.

Plate mills: Shearmen's helpers, $17.47. Tablemen, sheared, $31.35; Screwmen, sheared, $32.36.

Sheet mills: Openers, $12.50; Doublers, $19.21; Sheet Heaters, $42.60.

Open hearth furnaces: Stockers, $15.30. Stopper setters, $27.78; Melters helpers, first $33.89.

Standard rail mills: Hot bed men, $15.01; Table levermen, $27.51. Rollers, $50.18

Tin plate mills: Screw boys, $15.01; Catchers, $23.23; Shearmen, $30.66.

A similarity in earnings by no means indicates a similarity in full-time weekly hours, for example, it will be noticed that blast furnace keepers and sheet mill doublers have almost identical full-time weekly earnings, but the working time for these earnings differs greatly in the two occupations, the average full-time hours per week of keepers being 81.9, while that of doublers is only 42.7.

The rate of wages paid common laborers is to a large extent a basic rate from which are determined the rates for others occupations requiring little skill, hence the rate for common labor is of importance beyond the limits of the occupation proper. The rate per hour is practically the same in all departments of a plant, but the earnings per day or week, of course, are determined by the number of hours worked. The average rate per hour of laborers in 1913 in the nine departments covered by this report was 20.1c, while the average full-time hours per week ranged from 64.7 to 76.2, and the average full-time weekly earnings from $11.51 to $14.38.

PLAY TO A TIE

Darkness Halts Game Between Married and Single Men.

The married men and the single men of the Young Men's Bible Class of the First Methodist Episcopal Church met in a terrific game of baseball last evening on the West Side grounds. The game was called at the end of the fifth inning, however, on account of darkness, with the score standing at 5-5.

The game was a pitchers' battle all the time. Cy Kennell twirled for the single men and Bob Buttermore for the married men. Although Bob is not a married man, the singles had to lend him in order to have a game, as there was not a pitcher among the married men.

The feature of the game was a three base hit by Ritchie for the married men. The tie will be played off some time next week. The two teams expect to play a series of games in the future. After it is possible to determine the stars, a team will be picked out fit to challenge any fast nine.
